Preface and Acknowledgements

This index has been a very long time in coming. During the late 1970s or early 1980s, students at Conrad Grebel College in Waterloo, under the supervision of Dr. Frank H. Epp, began the indexing task. Without computers or even typewriters, students created handwritten lists. Eventually these lists were organized into nine (9) separate sections (indexes), the largest being the subject index. A few pages were typed perhaps as a sample of what the final product might look like. With enough perseverance, a researcher could use these handwritten indexes to access more efficiently the content of The Canadian Mennonite. This rudimentary index was photocopied and shared with the Mennonite Heritage Centre in the late 1990s. Epp and his students are the first to be acknowledged.

Little else was done with the index for many years, until 2009 when archivist Conrad Stoesz was looking for a project that a volunteer at the Centre for Mennonite Brethren Studies could do. Together with Laureen Harder Gissing from the Mennonite Archives of Ontario, we discussed and agreed on a plan, whereby volunteer Lois Wedel would enter all the data from these indexes into a spreadsheet, and I would manipulate the data into a useable index. Without the hours of data entry by Lois Wedel this project could not have moved forward.

The final acknowledgement must get to Simon Hamm, a math and theology major from Canadian Mennonite University, who came to the Mennonite Heritage Centre this summer, in order to complete his CMU Practicum requirement. With computer programming skills and an excellent understanding of the goal for the project, he analysed the data for consistency, wrote computer scripts to re-format the volume number and issue to a date of publication, and produced the MS Word files which were also ready for publication.

A big thank you to all of the people, those named and those unnamed, that had a part in creating this index.

Introduction

The Canadian Mennonite was a weekly periodical founded in 1953 by D. W. Friesen & Sons in Altona, Manitoba. After an introductory issue dated 3 July 1953, the paper appeared regularly from 16 October 1953 until the final 32-page issue on 19 February 1971. At a time when Mennonite denominational papers in Canada still used German almost exclusively, this private initiative sought to reach out to many Canadian Mennonite young people and others who did not or could not read German-language periodicals. The publisher identified the paper as “Devoted to the affairs of Mennonites in Canada.”

An Advisory Board of Consulting Editors was appointed in June 1959. On 1 October 1962 the paper was transferred to The Canadian Mennonite Publishing Company with over 200 shareholders representing at least eight Mennonite groups. The first elected 12-member Board of Directors included four of the earlier Consulting Editors. It announced that “the basic format and direction of the paper remains the same.” At the direction of the shareholders, the Company was converted to a new non-profit Canadian Mennonite Association in June 1963. The publishing office moved from Altona to Winnipeg in February 1965. A further name change to Canadian Mennonite Publishing Association took place in April 1967.

Frank H. Epp, Abbotsford, BC was appointed as the paper’s first editor following his graduation from Canadian Mennonite Bible College. Over the years several assistant or associate editors shared the responsibility: Larry Kehler (July 1955-July 1956); Aaron Klassen (June 1959-June 1961); David Kroeker (May 1963-August 1969); George C. Friesen (August 1969-). Kehler rejoined the editorial staff in June 1966 and succeeded Frank Epp as Editor and General Manager in August 1967. Part-time staff included William Klassen (Bible Study Editor, January 1966-October 1967); Albert Zehr (Ontario Editor, September 1968-August 1969); Vernon Leis (Ontario, August 1969-1971); Hugo Jantz (BC Editor, May 1969-1971).

The format throughout its history was 28 x 38 cm with five columns of text and photographs. Normal size was 8 pages, but 10 or 12-page issues were not uncommon. The non-profit paper was funded by advertising revenue and subscription income. Rates rose gradually from $2 per year to $5.

The masthead sub-title of the paper was “A weekly paper of news and opinion,” although Biblical quotations were also used in the earlier years. In addition to reporting news about Mennonites in Canada and beyond, regular features of the paper included book reviews and notes, reports on schools, institutes and colleges, and articles of “opinion, interpretation and comment.” The Glory and the Shame, a collection of editorials by Frank H. Epp published in booklet form in 1968, is a reflection of the paper’s stance. Swath and Sheaf, a booklet of selections from a columnist using the pen name “Isbrandt Hildebrand,” shows another forum in which potentially controversial issues were treated.

The subscriber base of the paper remained too small to sustain it financially, even with the added revenue from advertising. After a peak of about 6,000 in 1966, it again declined to just over 4,000 when the directors decided to end the publication. Most subscribers were from western Canada.

Although The Canadian Mennonite was unable to sustain itself, it clearly filled a need while it was in existence. On the date of its last issue, an ad hoc group met at the MCC (Ontario) offices in Kitchener to discuss how to fill “the communication gap left on February 19 when The Canadian Mennonite was last published.” In August, 1971, the first issue of The Mennonite Reporter, with editorial team of Frank H. Epp and Dave Kroeker, appeared to fill that gap.

Indexes

1. Author Index

In this index, generally the authors of articles are listed in alphabetical order, including the topic of many of the articles. After each entry, the date (day-month-year) and page number are indicated. For serialized articles, the date and page number of the first instalment is given, followed by the number of instalments, and the date of the concluding instalment; e.g. 12 Oct 1962, p.7 [11] 21 Dec 1962.

2. Subject Index

The subject index is by far the largest section in this work. Listed alphabetically with sub-headings and sub-sub headings, are topics, people, places, organizations, events and activities. This index also includes “see” and “see also” references to help researchers be more comprehensive in their work.

3. Editorial Index

This index lists in alphabetical order the titles of editorial articles followed by the date and page number.

4. Editorial Subjects

Like the Subject index, this index lists the topics, organization, people and events that were written about in the editorials.

5. Letter Writers

This index lists the authors of the letters to the editor in alphabetical order, followed by the date and page number of the publication of these.

6. Book Titles

This index lists in alphabetical order the titles of books that were reviewed, followed by the date and page number.

7. Book Reviewers

This index lists in alphabetical order the people that wrote book reviews, followed by the date and page number.

8. Book Authors

This index lists in alphabetical order the authors of the books that were reviewed, followed by the date and page number.

9. Book Publishers

This index lists in alphabetical order the names of the publishers whose books were reviewed, followed by the date and page number.
